The 7th Floor 2: Emily's Escape

By: Rachel Pepin

...continued

Lizzy looked happily down at the four figures retreating in the distance. She had succeeded. She would be free. No more young children would have to suffer to keep those two horrid apparitions around any longer... And even better, her prematurely-harnessed spirit would be at rest, something that had eluded her for so long.

"Elizabeth Habberson!" came the sharp and grinding voice of Ellis. And so it begins, thought Lizzy with a smile.

"Where is that scoundrel of a girl?" Robert demanded in his deep, demeaning timbre. "Gone," said Lizzy happily.

"Gone?!" Ellis' voice turned shriller than usual. "What do you mean, 'gone?!'" Lizzy turned, grinning.

"I mean gone. She left, alive and well." Her grin widened as Ellis let out an ear-piercing scream. Robert took three large strides towards her.

"You let her escape, didn't you, you insignificant little brat?!" he hollered.

"No indeed. I helped her willingly." Robert's face contorted in rage. He wound his hand up and came down to slap her. The young ghost didn't even flinch as his hand passed clean through her face.

"NO!" the adults roared, as a cyclone appeared in the middle of the room, sucking up the cold blooded murderers. "NO!!! WE'LL GET YOU FOR THIS!!! MARK OUR WORDS; YOU HAVE NOT SEEN THE LAST OF US!!!" The twister disappeared, disposing of them once and for all.

"Actually," she replied to the quiet room. "I have." A beam of warm light landed on her head. Elizabeth Rose Walters closed her eyes, as the light faded, taking her with it.

"I welcome you sleep. You have evaded me for too long." These words were the last the young girl ever spoke, and the hotel room was silent once more.

"My dear Emily!" Wanda cried, taking up the young girl in her arms. "Oh, how I've missed you so!" Pretty soon, Emily was the center of one of the biggest group hugs in history. Even Elaine pitched in, reluctantly, of course. Roger was the first to break off.

"Emily, tell us what happened!" He said. "You must have had quite the adventure!" His young, 8-year-old acquaintance smiled.

“I can’t wait to tell you,” she replied mischievously. “But I was knocked out most the time. I might be able to recall some details, but I think best after pancakes.” And Emily swore she heard a laugh, and a gentle voice muttering.

“You are such an 8-year-old,” it said.

THE RUNAWAYS (Last story of the year)

Will didn’t know what to do. He screamed and screamed for Veronica and Macy. He screamed for help. But no one came. Then for a change, he heard a scream. A blood curdling scream that made him get goosebumps. Then he heard a soft plea for mercy.

“Please! L-leave me a-alone!” Veronica sobbed.

“Macy! Veronica!” Will screamed again. There was another scream, then a crash. Another scream. And then a crash, but this time, something fell through the door. He inched towards the long object laying on the ground. It wasn’t Veronica. And it wasn’t Macy. It was the person who must’ve locked the door, the person who Veronica was screaming at.

The person didn’t move. But it was breathing. Then, from upstairs, he heard Macy say, “Veronica. Veronica, are you okay? Veronica.” Macy was shaking Veronica who was lying on the floor. “Veronica! Will, where are you?” Just then the man on the floor shuddered, but he didn’t get up.

Quickly, Will ran towards the stairs- the man still didn’t move. He walked up the stairs and saw Macy and Veronica. Macy saw him, too.

“Will!” Macy screamed as she threw her arms at Will.

“Macy! What happened?” Will asked, occasionally eyeing the stairs.

“A evil man- came and attacked us.” Macy cried out.

“Why is Veronica on the floor? What happened to her?”

“I didn’t see. I was hiding in the closet. After I heard a loud BOOM, I came out to see what happened, and Veronica was on the floor.”

“Okay. Umm.... you go sit. I’m gonna try and wake her up.” Will said, shoving Macy to the side, and kneeling down next to Veronica. He shook her a few times. She wasn’t bleeding that much, so she couldn’t have been stabbed or shot, she was just knocked out.

There was a grunt from downstairs and Will got up to see what happened. The man was gone.

Stolen Part 3
by Ashley Sanville

I was still running down the street trying to look for Justin. But he was nowhere to be found. I called his name and looked for the car. I thought that all hope was lost. What I didn't want to do was tell my parents what had happened. I knew they wouldn't blame me but just the thought of telling them. I decided to go home and tell them right away. But when I got home it looked like they already had found out. Cop cars were in the driveway. Mom was crying and Dad was telling the cops what Justin looked like. When Mom saw me she hugged me real tight. "Is Justin with you?" she asked.

"No he's not with me," it was so hard to tell her.

"Did you see what happened?"

"All I know is that I saw Justin being driven away in a black car."

My Mom then ran over to the cops dragging me with her.

I told the cops what had happened from beginning to end. They all left to look for Justin. I hoped that they would find him. But then again no one knows where he is by now. That night as I was going to sleep. Which was nearly impossible, I couldn't get Justin's scream out of my head. I wondered if he was even still alive. If he was what could those horrible people do to him. There were so many questions I wanted answered. But no one could tell me. A few hours into the night the cops called and said he had information about where Justin was.

Stolen 4

by Ashley Sanville

I thought that I was dreaming at first. But when I looked over I saw Justin. He was tied up and so was I. I smiled at him and started crying. It seemed like I did that a lot lately. He then helped me up and we hugged each other for a while. I looked up and saw he was crying to. Now I didn't feel like I was the only one who cried alot. Then the car suddenly came to a stop. I looked and we were parked at an abandoned parking lot. I realized this were the cop had found the car. Before I knew it I was taken away from Justin for a split second. The people took the ropes of our feet but not the ones on our hands. Justin and I walked in front of the people. I never took my eyes off him. I was afraid to blink for the fear that this was just a dream. Then we were each going up a ladder. I figured out why the cops couldn't find Justin there was a secret door that they were going into. Justin and I were shoved into a room. They locked the door behind them. Justin said that we could talk now. "I missed you so much," I said.

"I missed you too."

"Justin we have to figure out a way to get out of here."

"I know and I have the perfect plan He said with a little sneer on his face. We are going to get out tomorrow night."

The next day when I woke up Justin was still asleep. I was so thirsty and starving to. Justin woke up a couple minutes later. "How are we supposed to get food and water,?" I said. " In a couple minutes they will bring little portions of food, and a tiny bit of water." "Did you miss us while you were gone,Justin?" " I thought about you guys all the time. And I'm really sorry about throwing the frog at your head. Did it hit you" "Yes , it did. I'm sorry that I said I hate you." " That's okay."

Before we could talk anymore the two people who had taken us gave us a little food and water. For some reason they wanted us alive. When they left I turned to Justin and asked him " Why do they want to keep us alive?"

"There waiting for Mom and Dad to give them money for our return."

After a while off talking we both fell asleep.

Justin woke me up in the middle of the night. He said that the guys were asleep and that now was the perfect time to escape. Once we were out of the room it was hard to find our way out. But we made it out without them finding us. We ran down the street and to the police station. It was incredible how they did not come looking for us. We led the cops to them and they were arrested. They cops rode us down to our house. We ran inside and gave our Mom and Dad a big hug.

The Class A boys baseball team won a nail biter at Chester on Tuesday, May 10th. A true team effort and some gutsy play calling helped the Huskies come back from two deficits to come back and win 7-5 in the top of the 7th. Seven different Huskies scored the seven runs with great hitting coming from Evan Rodgers, Mike McLean, and some clutch 7th inning base hits from Joey Lydick and Ryan Forkey. Great pitching came from Alex Fellows, Kenny Twomey, and Ryan Forkey. Zach Rioux and Matt Clark flashed some leather at short stop while some game-saving catches were made in the outfield by Evan Rodgers. The Huskies play again Wednesday and Thursday this week against Epping and Wilton.

Tri-Country Leagues Sportsmanship Award goes to....

the Huskies! Our school has received the Tri-Country League's sportsmanship award, this award is given to teams who are a good sport to everyone. Some of these sports are basketball, baseball, track, soccer, and golf. These teams travel around the Tri-country area of Rockingham, Hillsborough, and Merrimack. Playing teams like West Running Brook, Amherst, Hollis, and Windham. "Most kids play at least two sports" says Hood athletic director Rich Salcito. Riley Cahill, 14 said "this award was a big boost to the Hood team spirit." It means a lot he says, Riley says the school's coaches work hard to instill, respect, and good sportsmanship. Jericho Howell, 14, plays basketball, baseball, and runs cross country for Hood. He said being a good sport means others are affected by how you act on the playing field. "It's something to look up to", he says. Hood athletes also work very hard for their sports teams practicing daily. "Our school works really hard Maggie McCarthy says. "We are respectful to each other and to other teams," Grace said. "And we're looked up to by other schools." She said being good role models for younger students who want to play sports is part of the game. Salcito said he's proud of his young athletes and all they accomplish on and off the field.

Summer Happenings

Summer

Summer is finally here.
Such a wonderful time.
Sounds of wind chimes.
The laughter outside.
The beach at high tide.
The ice cream man.
Getting a tan.
These are the best ways to describe Summer.

TEACHER'S SUMMER BREAK

By Amber Quinlan

Though some may not like it,
And some just plain hate it,
School is ending and here comes Summer.
The fun in the pool and on the beach,
We say good bye to school,
But hello to no homework .
No more teachers,
For some it's sad,
Some they say, are really glad. :(
Teachers stay and plan next year,
While we enjoy Summer without a tear.
So if you think teachers have it easy,
Ask them how they spend their Summer break.

Summer Happenings

THIS SUMMER

This Summer, I should skip some rocks
Or teach my brother how to walk

I can swim in my pool
Boy, would that be awfully cool

I can sit and read a book
Or eat food that mom has cooked

I can visit my teacher's house
Then let loose a ratty mouse

I can watch a scary movie
Or a film that's very groovy

I can trash my sister's room
And then I'd learn to use a broom

I can learn the alphabet
Then I can go throw a fit

More and more things, this Summer to do
Maybe I'll spend it, visiting you

Pac-Man vs. Evil Mr. Pie

So, I've been in my helicopter watching and waiting for days and days and it's been the same. Not much new has come up. Evil Mr. Pie went home to get a drink because his throat was getting dry from all the yelling. During this time, Pac-Man saw an opportunity to send one of his droids over enemy lines.

SCHOOL'S COOLER THAN THE POOL

So, you know how people are saying, "Ooooh, I can't wait to go swimming and get out of this stupid school."? Well, I wish I could go back to school, because when you really look at it, it's no better than homework and books and teachers and school lunches and blah, blah, blah.

So, at the pool, there's always one or two kids that pee, parents are always saying 'no jumping', you get splashed, your hair gets really tangly, your friends will come over just to use it, and when people make those "bubbles". UUUHHHH!

See, the pool isn't any better than school. Don't get me wrong, I hate school, but the pool is way worse! You don't even wanna know what happens when my cousin comes over!
